St. Mary's County Library Announces New Website and Logo

See the new website at www.stmalib.org

December 13, 2017 – Leonardtown, Md. – The St. Mary's County Library is excited to announce a new website and updated logo. The new website will be available via a link on the current website for a few weeks before officially going live. Customers are encouraged to use the new site to find their favorite links and features while exploring all the new content.

The new website and logo update were made possible through an innovation grant from the Maryland State Library through the Southern Maryland Regional Library Association. A combination of in-house expertise and DC Web Designers created a website with streamlined searching and more intuitive navigation. With slightly updated colors and all-new design, the new site will provide a beautiful and comprehensive user experience for our customers.

"We are excited about our new website launch and the robust information it provides for customers" said Sara Stephenson, Virtual Services Coordinator. "We believe that this new site will allow our customers to have a very informative experience. The easier navigation will hopefully help everyone find new services and collections."

The new website is responsive and will be easily viewed on mobile devices and tablets. This feature will help customers more easily access all the library has to offer no matter where they are.

St Mary's County Library Director, Michael Blackwell, said "Our new website will make finding resources even easier for customers who mainly access library services online. The update will offer more direct access to collections and services, enhancing our mission of promoting reading and inspiring learning."
